Mrs. Ella Nichols of Medford, Mass., was a recent caller in the place. Julia Gupit is assisting Mrs. Bert Brackett of a patient period—of about 100 years ago—for the church was erected in 1839. It is rather the interior of the church—the decorations—all the work of one woman's fingers—that have made it the object of interest to its people.

How can such a place be described? It must be seen to be appreciated. The emblems consisted of large anchors and lyres and the mottoes were from the Scriptures. On either side wall were pictures of the Christ, set in the auditorium, immense floral arches rising to a height of twelve feet from the floor and having a span of twenty feet, were conspicuous. Much fringed paper was used as the basis of the trimmings to these arches. Large vases, made of paper and filled with giant bouquets of worsted or cotton, were in the corners.

Of particular interest were the draperies at the windows—eight of them. At a distance the draperies appeared to be of ecor-colored, but close inspection showed them to have been made of mosquito netting, with designs from wall paper pasted upon them. The over-drapery or lambrequins are also of this brownish tint of wall paper.

I should not neglect to mention the fact that the gallery to the church contained a room which Mrs. Monmouth occupied when she came there to take charge of the church services in the '70's and evidently she had an observation window in her gallery so that she could look down into the church from it. This space is screened by curtains.

Visitors to the old church are invited to register in a book kept for the purpose.

And now for the story of this quaint country church erected, as I have said, in 1839 as a union church. Preswilt Baptists and Congregationalists predominated in the town, and the frame work was put up by the Free Baptists, who boarded the building. Their funds being exhausted, the Congregationalists joined in the enterprise to make it a union church. Lumber and labor were given by the inhabitants, and the sale of church pews helped in the church funds. So it was finished, and for many years regular services were held. In process of time the church came to be used only occasionally. In 1871, soon after the Chicago fire, when all the country was importuned for contributions, Mrs. Monmouth ministered to the spiritual wants of this community. Repairs were made, and changes made in the interior. The room over the vestibule was fitted for her occupancy on her weekly visits. Very early she began the work of decoration with worsted mottoes and trimmings. From the fact that one million pieces are comprised in decoration, the largest size of a man's hand, and all accomplished by one woman, one realizes how much time, effort and patience went into her work. Mrs. Monmouth charmed by her personality, and largely through her social life of the community, she became a source of her ministry are said to be delightful memories to those who resided in the vicinity and Mrs. Monmouth herself said: "They embraced the happiest period of my life."

There is a pathetic side to her life. The loss of her property through a swindler led her into retirement at the home of her father, and she became a recluse. She was practically penniless, and made herself clothes in ingenious ways. A straw bedtick suit worn by her was trimmed with scraps of the drill and she said to have been attractive. For shoes she took the soles of rubbers, lined them with flannel and laced them to her feet as sandals. Later she made shoes of an overcoat of her father's, of which she was very proud. Neighbors, knowing her circumstances, often made contributions of food, placing their offerings under a window of the chamber where she spent most of her time. She would let down a rope without showing her face, and draw up the basket.

Her house was decorated, it is said, much as was the Worsted Church, and it became an object of interest. She died in 1887 at the home of a niece. A remarkable woman in many ways, possessed of literary talents, and something of a poet and writer, she was a much traveled woman, and this church at Canterbury is perhaps the most striking evidence of her desire to adorn, decorate and furnish what she considered unattractive bare walls, and so it is to be hoped that the decorations will be preserved. Who of us today exercises such diligence as well as ability to make much out of little?

GOVERNMENT OR CHARITY MUST FEED 25,000,000 THIS WINTER SAYS FORTUNE
Whether or not business has turned the corner, it is conservative to estimate that next winter's relief problem will involve caring for 25,000,000 souls whose income has been totally cut off by the depression. This statement is made and substantiated by a nation-wide survey of unemployment relief which appears under the heading of "No one has starved" and the sub-head, "Which is not true" in the September issue of Fortune magazine. Fortune declares that the number of totally unemployed in the United States will be 11,000,000 next winter at the present rate of increase. With their dependents, this will mean 27,000,000 whose income will have stopped. Some of these 27,000,000 still have savings and other resources, but at least 25,000,000 will require charity or other relief, the magazine says. The Federal allowance of $300,000,000 for loans to the states for unemployment relief works out to only $12 per piece for those who must be supported by public or private charity through the winter, Fortune points out.

"The problem was never honestly attacked as a national problem—the facts were never frankly faced as facts."

Famous Worsted Church

Located at Canterbury, N. H.—Meece for Tourists—Special Services Held During Summer Season

One of the most interesting places to visit in New Hampshire is the famous Worsted Church at Canterbury. In past summers at the church special services have been held. Summer visitors who are noted musicians, have volunteered their services and a number of well known clergymen have preached. At one service nearly 800 were present and at another Sunday service of about 400 and 450 were in attendance.

May F. Pillsbury, editor of the Somerville (Mass.) Journal, visited the church during the past season and wrote a very interesting account of her trip in a recent issue of the Journal. She said in part:

It is the novel or unusual thing that makes its appeal to many of us, and adds color to our days, and when we come across such object we desire to let others share the experience. So to a unique church, situated in one of the lovely towns of New Hampshire, to which it may privilege recently to motor and visit, I call attention in the hope that others may venture to the same place. I refer to the Worsted Church at Canterbury, N. H.

A plan of the church from the outside and much after the order of many a country schoolhouse, its architecture is not what commends it especially to the attention, for there is no Christopher Wren steeple or other of the finer features of colonial architecture to attract the eye. It speaks of a pioneer period—that of about 100 years ago—for the church was erected in 1839. It is rather the interior of the church—the decorations—all the work of one woman's fingers—that have made it the object of interest to its people.

How can such a place be described? It must be seen to be appreciated. The emblems consisted of large anchors and lyres and the mottoes were from the Scriptures. ## THIS YEAR OR NEVER!

You as an adult can postpone plans... to a changed economy, but in... the education of children it is a... of this year or never. The education... is denied to childhood today is irrevocably lost. We cannot plot the opportu... of youth along the zigzag lines of a... graph. Childhood is all too... a period in which to become fitted... for the venter of modern life.

We cannot say to a child: "Next... year you shall see about improving your... instruction in health. Next year you... shall provide a new course in citizenship... which fits you for society's pressing prob... We shall buy you some fine new li... brary books, new maps, new laboratory... apparatus, next year. Next year we shall... furnish you a wonderful textbook in ge... ography, or history, or arithmetic." For... that child, this year's schooling is at least... a twelfth, perhaps an eighth, a half-... even all—of his remaining education.

It is this year or never!

Many things for which we spent pub... lic money may be postponed: roads, bridges, new pavements, new lights, but... not the education of youth. Are you... helping people to see this? The fine ed... ucational opportunities enjoyed by child... ren today have not come about by acci... dent. Are you to allow them to be dissi... pated at the first financial emergency? The teacher can hold up her end, if they are not overworked, but must have good... tools. The bare walls are not enough to... fit the child for the demands of this... complex age.

Teachers should stand firm for the sac... ered rights of every child—the child of... 1932 is no less deserving than the child... of 1929. The opportunities we deny him now are lost forever.

IS A RAILROAD A GOOD CITIZEN?

One of the best examples of what a... railroad means to any community is given... in the following editorial from the Wil... liston, North Dakota, Herald:

"The Great Northern sent a check... Monday for its taxes. It was for $198,487.49. It is the biggest check for taxes an... nually received. It may always be de... pended upon. The Great Northern is nev... er a delinquent taxpayer. Most of us... never think of it as a citizen of the com... munity. Few of us realize, until the mat... ter is called to our attention, as in this... case, what a part it has in keeping things... going hereabouts. It helps pay for our... schools, roads and bridges, and takes care... of our needs. It discharges all the du... ties of citizenship on the paying end with... little complaint."

"We can afford to be most patient with... all our railroads. They face conditions of... change that are not yet fully or clearly... developed. In them is invested a lot of... the money of plain everyday people."

What they mean is that the community... sense is... What they mean is that the community... sense is...

Thousands of American communities... depend upon these railroad tax checks. What would happen to the small taxpayer... if railroads were government-owned and... tax-exempt? His taxes would probably be... so high he could not pay them.

THE FOREMOST ISSUE

At the recent American Bankers' Association... convention, excessive taxation and... public expenditures were the leading sub... jects presented by nationally prominent... speakers.

It is literally amazing how many fi... nancial and industrial organizations are... regarding the tax problem as the most... important of all our difficulties at this... time. We have reached a point in our af... fairs where the cost of government is be... coming an impassable barrier in the way... of investment of capital, the develop... ment of industry, the education of estates... and the employment of labor. Money that... once flowed into productive enterprises, which... sorely needs new funds now, is either... hoarded or invested in tax-free govern... ment bonds. Millions of American... investors have found a real and personal... meaning in the old saying that "the... power to tax is the power to destroy."

We have seen what expanded govern... mental activities with their resulting in... fluence on the tax bill, have done in Eng... land, Germany, Australia and lesser pow... ers. The role, which was created by the... unemployed and the distressed, has be... come precisely the opposite effect—it has... created more unemployment and more... distress by stifling industry. So with the... rest of those governmental panaceas which... have taken billions from the pockets of the... taxpayers of the world. Whether America's tomorrow will be bright or... clouded depends on what action we take... in handling the tax problem now.

BEAUTIFYING THE HIGHWAYS

This little story from Augusta will meet... with warm commendation: Highway beautification in Maine (so it... reads) is being furthered by the Maine... Development Commission through the... placing of markers along the principal... fouring routes of the State. The latest... in a series of such markers identifies the... Arnold Highway and the towns through... which it passes. These signs are orna... mented by wrought iron framework and... iron silhouettes depicting a scene man... aged by Colonial soldiers. Thus there is re... called the story of Benedict Arnold's ex... pedition against Quebec. Other highway... markers, designed by the Commission will... indicate the routes of the Roosevelt Trail... the Pequawket Trail, the Osprey Trail... and the Atlantic Highway. The road... well markers, distinguished by silhouettes... of the Rough Rider President mounted... on a horse, are in place at several points. Other markers, on which the figures of... Indians and ships will be shown in silhou... ette are being prepared for erection in the... near future.

There is a whole lot of psychology—a... much over-worked word—in these forms... of publicity. They impress upon the... reader a sense of the abundance of... Maine's historical and romantic associa... tions and advance by that much the ap... peal which Maine makes to the great world... that visits it in vacation time. No mark... er is without its significance. It is for... such reasons that this paper has urged the... setting up of these purveyors of publicity... in our own neighborhood, the value of... which would certainly be recognized.

I KNOW SHE IS WAITING OVER THERE

I took from the shelf a book last night... To read a bit or I sought repose. As I turned its pages to the fading light... Between its leaves was a faded rose. And I thought of the days of long ago... When we wandered together o'er fields afar, But now she's waiting over there after. And keeping for me those gates ajar. We wandered 'er 'er field and dale, We sat 'neath the shade of the sheltering oak. We made chain of the lions' stems But soon, alas, that chain was broken. But another chain we made those days, While the sunbeams played 'mong her locks of gold.

We sealed each link with a lovers' kiss As I told the tale that is centuries old. But she was too fair for this earthly sphere The angels called her from after. And now she's waiting over there, And keeping for me those gates ajar. W. E. W.

ONLY ORIGINAL GOOSE CORNER IN THE UNIVERSE

Mrs. Hatch of Mile Road, Goose Corner, Waterford, N. H., has the following to say about a "Bombling Up and Down Story" labeled Goose Corner Philosophy which recently appeared in this paper. We beg her pardon and indulgences.

"Is there another Goose Corner? Or has another Goose Corner citizen broken into print? Just lately the Goose received a copy of a very ably edited paper of Norway, Maine, in which occurred a marked paragraph labeled 'Goose Corner Philosophy'."

"Not gully", exclaimed the Goose with fervor and emphasis. The philosophy may have been sound, but it was not the Goose's brand. The humor may have been really funny, but somehow it did not induce gleeful chuckles from the Goose.

Words indeed were ingeniously mis-spelled and diction peeked out of joint, but it takes more than angled words and warped diction to make up Goose Corner philosophy.

We people who are lucky enough to come here for vacations or to live here the year around are inclined to believe there is but one grand and glorious Goose Corner. All other Goose Corners (if there are any) can be but feeble imitations of our one and only.

The Goose is under amazing obligations to the State of Maine for it provides her with a husband and a really the State of Maine must grab off our Goose Corner, or label as Goose Corner Philosophy that which originated somewhere else.

For all that the Goose was glad to see the Norway paper which seemed to her just about a 100 per cent country newspaper."

YOUTH HAS MANY OPPORTUNITIES

The oft-repeated cry that youth has few opportunities today is scouted by Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, writing in the July issue of "Moore Magazine."

"It is wonderful to be young today," he writes. "Shame on the person who says that opportunity is dead! The world is calling for just such young Americans as we were graduated from our schools in June. In every quarter of the globe you will find our young men and women concerned with the progress of humanity whether it be in an industrial and economic way, or for the betterment of social conditions. Already the world is weary of depression and is beginning to discard old methods and find new. In this awakening there will come greater opportunity than ever before."

Few, if any of us, live to read the account of our death in a newspaper. But this is what happened to Dr. Macintosh at Fort Fairfield.
